A DELINQUENT INSURANCE AGENT.

THE PROFITS OUT OF ALL PROPORTION TO THE RISK -CLUMSY WORK AT BEST.

The mystery surrounding the forgery of the checks of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, of Nos. 156 and 158 Broadway, was partially cleared away yesterday. The circumstances connected with the discover, of these francis were published exclusively in The Tribune of Bunday. So far, the management of the insurance company say, but two of these forged checks have come to light.

The first was for $950, and passed through the Clearing House and was presented at the insurance company's counter on Monday of last week. It was drawn upon the First National Bank of this city, where the insurance company had no account, had been marked " no funds," and bore the indersement of the International Trust Company, No. 45 Milk-st., Boston. The check had been printed with ordinary type, upon inferior paper, and was a common looking piece of work. The check bore what purported to be the signature of James M. McLean, president, and was countersigned as is usual by Jacob L. Halsey and H. B. Stokes, the first and second wice-presidents. They were all good imitations of these ers' signatures, but as the regular checks of the com pany are handsomely prepared by the American Bank Note Company from engraved plates, the difference in the printing was too striking to require a moment for detection, and Mr. Halsey pronounced the paper a forcery at once.

The next day a similar check drawn for $960 and bearing the indorsement of a Springfield, Mass., bank, was returned through the Clearing House. It was arawn upon the First National Bank, where it had been indorsed " no funds," and was in all respects like the ther except that it bore the indorsement of the Springfield bank instead of the Boston Trust Company.

SETTING DETECTIVES TO WORK. When the first forgery appeared the officers of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company placed the case in the hands of their special detectives, who have discovered the following facts: The first check, for $950, which came from Boston, had been offered in that city about the middle of January by a person whose appearonce tailies with that of one of the Manhattan's agents in the State of Massachusetts, to a creditor of his in payment of a long standing debt. The supposed agent re-quested his creditor to take out the amount due and pay uested his creditor to take out the amount due and pay he agent the difference in cash. This the creditor reused to do, and the fraudulent check was taken to the international Trust Company, of Boston, and that Instituten was requested to cash it. The Trust Company defined to do this unless the paper should be indorsed by responsible party. The cheek was finally left with the rost Company for collection, and was thus sent to few York in the usual course of business.

After leaving the check the same person returned to he Trust Company's office and asked that a small adance be made upon it. The request resulted in a small dvance—not exceeding $10—being made.

Springfield and after a futile effort to have the paper cashed left it for collection as he had left the other in Boston.

In the meantime, President Melean received a telegram from W. H. Bradford, a Beston printer, asking if the Manihattan Life insurance Company had ordered a large quantity of cacels printed.

The company's detectives were sent at once to visit Mr. Bradford, and learned that a man, judged by the description given of him at the printing office to be the same agent, had called the reasonst at month ago and had ordered several thousand clast with other work to be done for the Manihattan Company, of New York, representing that they were necessary for the company's Massachusetis husiness. Some days inter this person came again and asked for roots. He got three or feir proofs of the printed cheeks on the First National Bank. Mr. Bradford asserts that these proofs were the only ones taken and that hos others were obtained by the person, who coker to the printing done. It is ship, however, that he did receive proof copies of cheeks for making drafts upon both the Chizens' Eand and the Union Prost Company, of this city, where the Manihattan company have accounts, and that large a aounts additional have been drawn forapon forged paper Wint this amount is will probably not be disclosed until after the arrest of the person guilty of the forged paper Wint this amount is will probably not be disclosed until after the arrest of the person guilty of the forged paper Wint this amount is will probably not be disclosed until after the arrest of the person guilty of the forged paper Wint this amount is will probably not be disclosed until after the arrest of the person guilty of the forged paper Wint this amount is will probably not be disclosed until after the arrest of the person guilty of the forged paper that this amount is will probably not be disclosed until after the arrest of the person guilty of the forged paper wint this amount is will probably the man had field it mich turn out that he is formed to the

Be side timinus and others of the Caucasian race, there was one African and one Chinaman, Ah Sain, who has a tambly in the Bowery, and who was accused of shooting Lum Goy, also a laundryman, was piaced on trial, but when a police officer testified that on the night of the shooting Ah saie rau into the police station and caided out "Me shootee man. Har gee me quick," the Chinaman concluded to plead guilty and a plea of assaid in the second degree was accepted.

Judge Martine's first sentence was one of one year and six months in the case of George Bradley, who pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary in the third degree. The new judge tempered justice with mercy by suspending sentence on Henry Meyers, a young man who defranded several colored women out of small soms of money, but who refunded the money. All of the cases tried before Judge Martine were sent to the District-Attorney's office since January 1. Judge Martine was unwilling to pass upon any cases which had been in his office while he was District-Attorney. He will be constantly occupied for several months in trying cases in one or another part of the court.

HER NAME WAS NOT "DENNIS."

HER NAME WAS NOT " DENNIS."

Laura Dennis was not the right name of the stage in Chicago in search of fame as an actress and was arrested at the Occidental Hotel on Saturday. It was said yesterday that she was the daughter of W 1. Iswin, of "The Chicago Inter-Ocean." At the Jefferson Market Court she was discharged by Justice White with the understanding that she was to return home with her relative, a Mr. Bajiard.

Inspector Byrnes said that Miss Irwin had not one anything more improper than to travel to New-York without the consent of her parents. She thought she had a talent for acting, as she had been praised on account of some part she had taken in private theatricals in Chicago, and she expected to get an engagement in a theatre in this city. She had become disencianted and was thouchtly reportant. On her way to New York she stopped in Detroit and had her long, curly hair cut off, expecting that the change would make her more theatrical in appearance. It was a pity, the inspector said, that her adventure could not have been kept out of the newspapers, as he was convinced that she was a good young woman.
